

COLUCCI, COLUCCI, MARCUS & FLAVIN, P.C. MILTON / BOSTON

"There are three things that distinguish a great law firm from the others," says managing partner Darin Colucci. "Results, results and results. There is no substitute." Indeed, over the course of its nearly 20-year history, COLUCCI, COLUCCI, MARCUS & FLAVIN, P.C., has become synonymous with achieving remarkable results for its devoted clients. "Over the years we've obtained personal injury cases that have yielded seven-figure awards for our clients after much bigger firms had vetted the case and advised the client that there was no hope," Darin Colucci says. "They simply couldn't see an avenue to recovery, whereas we could. We take it personally. We are, in a word, driven on behalf of our clients."

Already in 2011, the firm has marked its most successful year to date. A string of personal injury victories, particularly in the areas of work place negligence, professional negligence and nursing home neglect, has led to unprecedented recoveries. Regarding the latter category, the firm perhaps boasts the most robust practice in the Commonwealth. "We attract more nursing home negligence cases in Massachusetts, and now Rhode Island, than nearly any other firm," says Dino M. Colucci. "We're honored to represent these vulnerable, mistreated people."

The firm's overall success is also shaped by the other partners, associates and personnel who are no less driven. Matthew J. Marcus heads the firm's elder law department and has once again been recognized by his peers in Massachusetts Super Lawyers®. "You'll find no one more empathetic or knowledgeable in the area of elder law than Matt," says Darin Colucci. "His clients love him, because he truly listens to their concerns and allows them to take their time. He genuinely cares about them and this enables him to ensure that each client receives exactly what they need most." Paul Flavin heads the firm's business litigation and domestic relations department. Some of Massachusetts' largest and most successful companies turn to Flavin for counsel and litigation strategy.

Add recently acquired medical malpractice attorney Kevin Donius to the mix and the firm is poised for a limitless future.
