BOSTON LEADERS IN LAW

Justice After Disaster

Tireless and tenacious, Boston's Colucci, Colucci & Marcus, P.C. is one of the nation's preeminent personal injury practices.

A four-year-old boy slips unnoticed out of his day care classroom and wanders up five flights of stairs until he tragically falls off a rooftop because of a long-forgotten broken door. An elderly man suffering from advanced dementia somehow walks out the front door of his nursing home, undetected, and gets lost for several days in the woods across the street. By the time he's found, he barely has a pulse and dies several days later. A family of four is struck by a gasoline truck on a dark stretch of road, and a mother and two children die in the aftermath of a fiery explosion.

What do these heartbreaking scenarios have in common? Those who caused these tragedies were held to account by the law firm of Colucci, Colucci & Marcus, P.C. For nearly 30 years, the trial lawyers of Colucci, Colucci & Marcus have proudly and successfully represented the most vulnerable victims of negligence: children, the elderly, and those hardworking men and women who otherwise would stand no chance against well-funded insurance companies.

The firm's attorneys hold a remarkable track record of successes all the while retaining a unique personal connection to their clients. Although handling serious and catastrophic personal injury matters has always been the firm's mainstay, the team has found astounding success in other areas as well. For example, last year, the firm achieved a record-breaking $67.5 million settlement for hundreds of plaintiffs harmed by an unfair and deceptive business practice.

They attribute much of their success to what they do outside the office, too. "You have to get out from behind the desk," says Darin Colucci, the firm's managing partner. "It's really a very simple formula. Just combine hard work and ingenuity with about 100 years of joint experience, and you're in the red zone on every case." His brother, Dino, the firm's founding partner, agrees.

"We put the hard work in on the front end. That's the most fruitful time to compile evidence, talk to witnesses, and build the foundation of each case. Some of our opponents may outsize us, but they'll never outwork us," Dino says with pride and confidence. The Colucci brothers have also lived by the mantra: Keep the office small, but keep the talent elite.

"The people we have here are the best and the brightest. Nothing else will do," says the firm's third partner, Matthew Marcus.

In a crowded field of injury lawyers, Colucci, Colucci & Marcus has distinguished itself as the in-demand Boston area firm for those who are most vulnerable and catastrophically injured.
